MAKE BEDFORD "IDEAL"

Burgess Will Enforce Ordinances—Slot Machines Must Go.

The Bedford Board of Trade is advertising Bedford as an "Ideal Residence Town," with clean and beautiful surroundings. Generally, this is true, but at the present time it is far from being so.

As Chief Burgess I have been requested by a number of the citizens to make some effort to have the streets and public squares cleaned.

Therefore I earnestly ask all persons to clean up all paper and refuse of all kinds that may have collected on the streets in front of their respective business places and residences, and have it burned or hauled away, and the Borough Council should have the public squares cleaned and kept clean during the summer months.

The Council should also establish some place outside of the borough limits where all dirt, etc., could be taken and not permit it to be dumped on the river bank, as it has been in the past. One of the "beautiful" sights that greets the eyes of a passenger alighting from the train at the depot, is the dump in the rear of the Ridenour Building. This should not be, and steps should be taken at once to cover it up and stop the depositing of paper, tin cans, decayed fruit, dead animals, etc., there. It is a first-class breeder of disease, and is dangerous to buildings nearby, for a number of times boys have set fire to the paper and the fences near were burned.

Bedford, no doubt, will have more visitors this coming summer than it has in any one season in the past, and the coming of the delegation from Altoona some time next month should encourage all good citizens to do their best to make Old Bedford look good to the visitors.

There is an Ordinance prohibiting the throwing of paper, ashes, etc., on the streets, squares and alleys of the town, and it is hoped that in the future a little more care will be exercised, for any person or persons violating the ordinance make themselves liable to arrest and fine.

Ball Playing

Baseball playing, or throwing balls of any kind on the streets or public squares, is positively prohibited and any one disregarding this notice will be arrested, and dealt with according to the provisions of the Borough Ordinance.

Slot Machines

Complaint has been made of a number of slot machines that are being maintained and operated in the borough. The law in regard to slot machines is very plain, and notice is hereby given to all persons who have these machines to dispose of them at once, for the law will be enforced.

With the hope that immediate steps will be taken to clean the streets and alleys, vacant lots, etc., that the Borough Council will do its part, and that all good citizens will join in making Bedford a clean, ideal town in every respect, I am, Respectfully,

M. W. Corie,
Chief Burgess.

Bedford House Closed

The Bedford House, that historic hostelry, which was erected in 1771, and which entertained General Washington in 1793, closed its doors last night, being unable to continue in business without license, which was recently refused. This hotel had been conducted for a number of years by Col. John Hafer, and after his death the business was conducted by his family up until last night.

As was the hotel, so the late J. H. Hafer and his brother, Harry O. Hafer, in whose name the business was carried on from the death of his brother to its closing, were well and favorably known by traveling men far and wide. Many are those who regret the placing of a handicap upon the Bedford House which gave it not a fair chance in competition and necessitated the closing of its doors.

STATE RESERVES

Series of Articles on Department of Forestry by

WILLIAM F. BYERS

More Trees Should be Planted—Legislature Should Provide Means for Preserving the Forests.

The Pennsylvania Department of Forestry in every part of its organization, being mindful of the interests of the farmer, the lumberman, the manufacturer, the dwellers in cities, the continued wealth and prosperity of a long-lived commonwealth, has since its organization followed and will continue to follow the policy herein outlined as the one best fitted to produce desired results, and invites the co-operation of all the interested affected as perquisite for a successful system of forest conservation.

1. That since private woodlot owners hold more forest land than the state they should be aided in its care and development by the distribution of seedling forest trees at cost, by personal assistance where desired, and by information relating to the best and most economical methods of forest preservation and restoration.

2. That complete publicity concerning the work of the department is desirable in the interests of both the state and its citizens, and forest officials should utilize every opportunity to reach the public through the press, through public meetings, or other suitable means.

3. That since the present system of taxation drives the timber owner to cut his forests that he may avoid what amounts to confiscation by excessive taxation, the only wise system of forest taxation in this state is to tax the land annually and the timber crop only when the latter is cut for the market.

4. That at least twenty million of young forest trees should be planted annually on state lands alone, and that private woodlot owners should be encouraged and aided in planting as many more as possible.

5. That no Forester should be expected to develop and care for more than 10,000 acres and do it well.

6. That Foresters should be so located on reserves as to bring several into the same neighborhood, that the isolation may be broken, their safety assured, their families educated, and that better protection may be afforded the forest because of their mutual assistance.

7. That a complete system of telephone communication, especially for use in pressing emergencies, should exist between important forestry points; that a system of good roads be established and maintained on the reserve to connect with other important public roads and to reduce to a minimum the expense of removing and marketing the produce.

8. That a system of look-out stations (as recommended and discussed in the report of the Department of Forestry for the years 1903-04), connected by a telephone or equipped with complete signal, map and range-finding outfits, should be erected at commanding points to detect and locate fires; that during fire seasons a sufficient force of laborers should be employed, immediately available for the prevention and suppression of fires, and when not so engaged to be doing other necessary and valuable work, on the theory that it is cheaper to prevent than to suppress a fire and, in addition, the timber is saved.

9. That because of its location on one of the most important reserves where students can learn forestry, practice by actual labor and the principles of forest science by classroom instruction, the State Forest Academy at Mont Alto should be continually developed as a school of forestry and brought to the highest point of efficiency.

10. That since American forestry is in its infancy, extensive experimental work by plots for seeding and planting, by pure and mixed forests for rate of growth, and result of different methods of management of natural stands of timber should be carried on within each reserve, and accurate data collected and preserved for future use; and since the public is the owner of these lands they should be encouraged to enjoy them to the fullest extent that may be done without interfering with the purpose for which they were purchased.

11. That these policies, some of which now are and others of which ought immediately to be carried into practical operation, would mean a production of timber for the farmer's fences, fuel for his fire, and lumber for his buildings; for the lumberman, perpetuation of his industry; for the manufacturer, a steady supply of raw material for his plant; for the dwellers in the cities, outing grounds and a permanent supply of pure water; for the tired, under-paid citizen who needs simply rest and recreation to prevent his becoming an actual invalid, a place where he may find health and a renewal of life, and for the Commonwealth and all her citizens, the restoration of an industry which once was worth thirty million of dollars annually as the lumber fell from the saw and for which there can be no substitute, and also to curb the rapidly advancing prices of the necessary products of the forests. To accomplish these results, desirable, legitimate and born of economic necessity, it is incumbent upon the Legislature to provide the means.

SPRING FEVER

A man on third; two batters out; Two runs would win the game. If he could make a home-run clout, Deathless would be his fame.

He hitched his grimy trousers up And spat upon his hands; He pulled his cap athwart his eye And faced the howling stands.

"Three balls!" the fans yelled with delight.
"Two strikes!" the umpire said.
He knocked the next ball out of sight—
And then fell out of bed.

HECKERMAN LETTER

Some Easter Observances—Past And Present.

Columbus, O., March 24, 1910.

'Tis only a few days until Easter, the festive day, will be here and then how I wish I could be home that day to be a boy once more and color eggs, and perchance, fight eggs as in years gone by. Last Easter I was at the Arlington Hotel, in Memphis, Tenn., and for dinner we had new potatoes, peas, corn on cob, strawberries and in fact almost everything, even cantaloupes.

The country boy or girl before the war did not know a whole lot about the significance of Easter, but they were each and every one onto the Easter egg all right. You all know how it was and is today, that for two weeks before Easter Sunday, mothers could hardly get eggs enough for breakfast Sunday morning; and why? Because the boys and girls were hiding them. How well I remember that on Easter morning each one would bring their hidings and see which one had the greatest number. Once the writer had hid about a hat full and when he went for them Easter morning found only a nest of shells, for the rats had eaten Peep's eggs. Oh! how he cried and what a trouncing he got in the bargain, for in those days eggs were worth ten cents a dozen and not twenty, as today. Think of it! Whip a boy for hiding and feeding the rats on eggs that did not cost a cent each. If we wanted to color any, that had to be done the night before, and fifty years ago we used grass, onion hulls, hickory bark, blood root, madder, etc. No chemical dyes in those days.

I have just read as to how the date of Easter is determined and will tell you all. The very earliest date upon which Easter may possibly come is March 22, but in a period covering over two hundred years it only fell on that date once and then in 1818. The dates have been calculated from 1786 to 2013, both inclusive, being twelve cycles of the moon; and in all that time only four times has Easter come as early as March 23. It may come as late as April 25, and in 1886 Easter was on April 25, but it won't strike that date again until 1944. Easter in 1913 will be on March 23; don't forget it.

The day for Easter is the result of astronomical calculation. It falls upon the first Sunday following the first full moon after the vernal equinox. The sun crosses the spring equinoctial line March 21. If that day, therefore, should be on Saturday and the moon reach the full that night, the next day, Sunday, would, of course, be Easter.

BRONCHIAL TUBES

ALL STUFFED UP
While a resident of Washington, D. C., I suffered continually and intensely with a bronchial trouble that was simply terrible to endure. I would have spells that I could hardly breathe, I would choke up, fill up in my throat and bronchial tubes, and the doctoring that I did and the remedies used were of no benefit to me whatever. I heard about Booth's Hyomei being so beneficial in catarrhal and bronchial affections and procured an outfit. I received relief from the first by its use. I continued with it and received a cure. It is about two years since I have suffered at all from my former trouble.—Mrs. R. L. Pannell, 404 N. Augusta Street, Staunton, Va., March 26, 1909.

Hyomei is guaranteed by F. W. Jordan to cure catarrh, croup, bronchitis, coughs, colds and sore throat or money back.
A complete Hyomei (pronounced High-o-mei) outfit costs $1.00 at druggists everywhere. This includes a hard rubber pocket inhaler and bottle of Hyomei; extra bottles Hyomei cost 50c. Free sample bottle and booklet from Booth's Hyomei Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

M-I-O-N-A Cures Indigestion

It relieves stomach misery, sour stomach, belching, and cures all stomach diseases or money back. Large box of tablets 50 cents. Druggists in all towns

I have for a long time doubted whether or not the boys and girls of the present enjoy themselves as much as their grandfathers and grandmothers did. I think lots of "usens" are inclined to the belief that such is the belief. 'Tis very true that the boys and girls of the present do not have the same kind of amusement and enjoyment and work that their grandparents had, for the people are as the times in which they live. In pioneer days the ambition of the average young man and woman was to go into the forest and carve out a fortune. This meant hard work and plenty of it, for no machinery was then in use to help them along and, of course, this would not appeal to the average young man and woman of today. How well I remember of going to school with a piece of slate and a McGuffey's spelling book with a rough pencil in one jacket pocket while in the other I had tucked away a piece of cold sausage and two slices of bread spread with some good applebutter, happy in the thought that if I could only learn to read, write and cipher how happy I would be. Not so now with the boy or girl, for man measures up to the times in which he lives, be life what it may.

Fifty years ago a man would get from 37 to 50 cents a day for work, which meant from daylight till dark, for common labor, and a girl got from 37½ to 50 cents for a week's work, and she did not have to run barefooted at that. Families of those days generally consisted of husband, wife and eight to twelve children. Mothers were not as well educated as today along certain lines. Take the above and compare with the scale of the present day and ask yourself how they all got along on such meager salary. Why, the first money I earned was $15 per month for keeping school over in Monroe Township. Yet I lived and after paying board had some to put in a bank that afterwards failed and all I got out of two winters' schoolkeeping was a carload of boards.

High prices for all that the farmer raises, save potatoes, and the love of dress is why the merchant, as a rule, is always hardup. He can't say no and folks must live.

The weather for several days has been grand. Many farmers are plowing and some good housewives I see, as I go by, are sticking onions and working in the yards. There had been no rain in Ohio for three weeks until last Sunday and we have been having quite a wet spell ever since.

This is a beautiful city and no wonder that George Mann of Bedford likes it here. The new Mayor has squeezed the lid down so tight that one must be up and adding to know just where and what to do on a Sunday out here.

A great gathering of Buckeye Indians has been arranged for Columbus for the week of May 9th. Fully 5,000 Red Men of the reservation of Ohio and 1,000 daughters of Pocahontas, with hundreds of other wives, daughters and sisters of the Red Men are expected to be here at that time. Some one says it will be the largest great council ever held in the state.

Blessing of the palms began at 10 last Sunday, after which they were distributed. Palm Sunday, I think was observed by most all of the churches in the city. Faure's, "The Palm," was sung in many of the churches. Yours truly,

M. P. Heckerman.

One Conductor Who Was Cured

Mr. Wilford Adams is his name, and he writes about it.—"Some time ago I was confined to my bed with chronic rheumatism. I used two bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy with good effect, and the third bottle put me on my feet and I resumed work as conductor on the Lexington, Ky., Street Railway. It gave me more relief than any medicine I had ever used, and it will do all you claim in cases of rheumatism." Foley's Kidney Remedy cures rheumatism by eliminating the uric acid from the blood. Ed. D. Heckerman.

Women's Secrets

There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man or woman in the country. These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering, and they have been confided to Dr. R. V. Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help. That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that ninety-eight per cent. of all women treated by Dr. Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured. Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only. But when that record applies to the treatment of more than half-a-million women, in a practice of over 40 years, it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr. Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women, as the first of specialists in the treatment of women's diseases.

Every sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, absolutely without charge. All replies are mailed, sealed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing or advertising whatever, upon them. Write without fear as without fee, to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

SIGNIFICANT CARTOON

A cartoon by Johnson in yesterday's North American represents Mr. Taft as a student taking an examination and on the board before him are the following questions:

1. Explain why G. O. P. over Cannon is a vulgar fraction.

2. Write a cheerful composition on the election in the 14th Congressional District of Massachusetts.

3. When is a Root square?

4. Conservation plus Ballinger equals Guggenheim. Reduce this to simple terms and give the answer in votes.

Mr. Taft, the student, exclaims, "Oh, for vacation."

There is another feature to the cartoon but for the present it is not our purpose to consider the "golf-player."

The questions on the blackboard are ones of interest to the general public today.

With regard to the first, Cannonism is an issue. As Speaker of the House and a member of the Committee on Rules, from which he was recently removed by a combination of Democrats and Independent Republicans, he was more powerful even than the President of the United States. For the President can only suggest, while he as Speaker and a member of the "steering committee" could actually control legislation in the House where many important measures must originate.

To write a cheerful composition on the Congressional election in the 14th Massachusetts district is an impossibility, for the election of a Democrat in that district has no precedent and it was due to the passage by a Republican Congress of a tariff bill, sanctioned by the President, which failed to include promises made by Mr. Taft and lesser speakers in the campaign in which he was elected to serve the people, but in the sanctioning of which tariff measure he revealed his willingness to serve the trusts and the combines by keeping up rates—and the cost of living.

The third question he might have answered, figuratively, in a sentence by stating, "When he keeps his obligations and his promises," but this would have applied also, in a reflecting way to the distinguished student, hence he turned his head and sighed, "Oh, for vacation."

To have reduced to simple terms, "Conservation plus Ballinger equals Guggenheim" would not have been difficult, but it would have necessitated making public things that it was never intended the public should know.

At Huntingdon Theatre

Successes that are genuine "hits" in dramatic files have been exceptionally few considering the large number of offerings that have been thrust before the public during the last three seasons by known and unknown authors.

One of the most successful has been the young author, Avery Hopwood, who has made two immense successes in the comedy, "Seven Days," now running in New York and a drama, "This Woman and This Man," which met with remarkable success in New York at the Maxine Elliott Theatre—the play in which Miss Minnie Victorson, America's popular comedy and emotional actress, supported by a metropolitan cast will appear in Huntingdon at the New Grand Theatre. Special matinee 2:15 p. m. and night, Saturday, April 2.

PYTHIANISM IN BEDFORD

Interesting Meeting and Supper Held Last Monday Night.

The Convention of Bedford Lodge No. 436 K. of P. Monday evening of this week was another of the interesting kind. This has been the case at every convention since the new year has dawned upon Pythianism in Bedford and with one exception the attendance was much better than at many past meetings. The rank of Esquire was conferred upon candidate Weisel, and if you should ask him what he thinks of Pythianism thus far I don't think he will hesitate in giving you a pretty good answer. However, he has one more river to cross before he will know it all.

It might be said that the principal cause of the increased interest in Pythianism in our Lodge, as well as the initiations which have been conferred during the new year, is largely due to the fact that Bedford people find Pythianism what it really is intended to be, by being exemplified in the lives of its members, and aside from that our Castle has put on an entirely new appearance with the emblematic colors blazing out in great splendor, new carpet being placed on its floors and general improvements having been made just recently throughout the lodge room.

In fact, our castle hall has been made a very inviting and comfortable meeting place for its members, due to the fact that our present Board of Trustees, as well as every other member of No. 436, is anxious that we shall be up-to-date in every particular. And, by the way, we would not forget to tip our hats to the entertainment committee, which looks after the social end of the work. At the proper juncture during the session, said committee reported that luncheon would be served immediately after the lodge session at Allen's restaurant. There is no doubt but that all members who participated in the lunch did justice to the occasion. I am quite sure we would be glad to see a still greater increase in attendance next Monday night. The rank of Knight will be conferred on a candidate, and it is pretty certain that he will need a great deal of sympathy before he gets through.

We are indebted to our good brother, Past Grand Chancellor H. O. Kline, for a copy of the Life, Sprig of Myrtle, and the Pythian Advocate, which will be found on the desk of the Keeper of Records and Seals for any of the members who desire to read them. Boys, you know the contest that is on; if you don't, come next Monday night and Chancellor Commander Irwin will tell you.

THE WINE AND THE RUE

The following impressive poem by Mrs. E. S. Doty of this place appeared in the last issue of the Reformed Church Messenger:

As I go down this rugged trail,
And shadowy tears my heart assail,
How doth my thirsting spirit quail,
When I ask wine,
And God gives—rue.

Yet He will keep the balance true,
Faith, courage, hope, and joy renew,
When I ask wine,
And He gives rue!

The path is strewn with thorn and snare,
Heart burnings, anguish everywhere.
We must His crown of sorrow share,
So—ask not wine
When Christ had rue.

Still He will keep the balance true,
His peace and pardon let us sue,
When we ask wine,
'Tho' Christ had rue.

Let not my spirit faint or shrink,
Nor tarry long on sorrow's brink,
Nor yet refuse the bitter drink,
When God gives rue.

But thank Him—ere the journey's through
Ere to earth's tasks I bid adieu,
That He hath kept the balance true!
'Tho' some have wine,
While I have rue.

And when Death's shadowy eventide,
Shall lead me o'er the great Divide,
I'll reach Him—on the other side
And know if to my trust I'm true,
Why some had wine,
While I had rue.

For He will keep the balance true,
His plan of love for us pursue,
'Tho' some have wine—
While I have rue.

Accident May Bar You

In health today—on a bed of sickness tomorrow—then maybe forever uninsurable and the wife and babies unprotected. That is the story in Wm. S. Lysinger's ad. It's worth while to stop and read it.

¶ The important thing is the next step.

¶ You have been reading and thinking about life insurance.

¶ The next step is to act. NOW is the time.

THOUGHTS BY THE WAY

If people only said what they thought, there wouldn't be so much talking.—Farm Journal.

Always laugh when you can; it is a cheap medicine. Merriment is a philosophy not well understood. It is the sunny side of existence.—Byron.

Keep your light a-burning. Lots of things do not seem to be worth while, but it is not safe to look at them in just that way. Keep on doing.

As to people saying a few unkind words about us, we must not mind that any more than the old church steeple minds the rooks cawing about it.

A man cannot be his highest and best self without giving out those things which are best in him.—Bernard Snell.

A good honest laugh at a good honest joke or bit of sarcasm rubs out the gathering wrinkles of care; but an illtempered joke is like a poisoned arrow, which makes a wound, and leaves its poison after it is withdrawn.

Don't, when people say nice things to you, think that they must necessarily be insincere. It is quite as natural for some persons to put their nice thoughts about you into words as it is for them to breathe.

"I am not bound to win,
But I am bound to be true."
—Abraham Lincoln.

No one can be more profound than he really is. But everyone can learn and strive.—Schumann.

The work an unknown good man has done is like a vein of water flowing hidden underground, secretly making the ground green.—Carlyle.

MODISTIC MATTERS.

Titan Frocks of Black Satin the Latest For Small Folk.

The little folk with their long coats and dresses of black satin with black lace collars look like reproductions of Titian's canvases. Indoors they wear with such costumes sashes of rose or other bright color and hair bows of the same.

The advance modes for summer gowns show the tunic as being very popular. For instance, anything from a twelve and a half cent gingham to a foulard silk of good quality may be made in this favorite tunic or apron fashion.

A young woman with some bits of rich old gold brocade, the remains of an ancient waistcoat, has had the silk made into a pair of high heeled slippers to go with a black mousseline dinner gown. Pieces of old time brocade, if any remain, are no longer lavished on pincushions, but are being made into shoes and slippers.

The sailor blouse is such a satisfactory garment that it is always in demand. This one includes the plaits at the shoulders that are to be so popular in the spring. It can be worn with or without the shield, and the shield can be cut either high or low.

VANITY'S VISIONS.

A Hint For the Motorist—Stunning Designs in Foulards.

The motor coats of rough blanket cloth that were worn last summer are to be popular again this year. They are used for motor, yacht, driving and for general service. Some are all white; others are trimmed with black or blue or a dull red stripe. They are cut on a large and loose plan and have four or five flat pockets.

Foulards are in the shops ready for spring purchasers. A smart design has pinhead dots of white on a dark blue ground of exceptionally lovely tone, with a rippling moire pattern running over the surface.

The new linen frocks are very pretty. This one shows lines of green on a background of natural color and is trimmed with green, with a chemise of white embroidery. The lines of the dress are all simple, yet very effective. For something a little more elaborate the trimming could be of a contrasting color.

These May Manton patterns are cut for girls of fourteen and sixteen years of age. The household goods were saved but he lost all his meat, three 50-pound cans of lard, and all provisions in the cellar, including two barrels of vinegar and 25 or 30 bushels of potatoes. Everybody worked like beavers, and then raised a purse of $31 and presented the same to Mr. Elliott. J. V. "Put that next. Here. Madeline Jenks," Brand began to write. "An inmate of 243½ West Pearl street. What did she do?"

"She destroyed herself utterly!" the new reporter wailed.

Brand went on writing.

"Is she dead?"

"Yes, sir."

"Shot and killed herself—when?"

"Tonight at 9 o'clock."

Brand wrote on.

"Last night at 9 o'clock. Why?"

Powell answered very intensely:

"Oh, she could no longer face the ghastliness of her existence. She knew she—"

"She was weary of life in the streets."

"I don't blame her," Brand commented to himself. He turned to Powell. "There's your story. Thirty words—you had 3,000. And remember the story of the creation was told in 600 words."

Powell picked up the pages of his story which Brand had discarded and walked dejectedly away.

"Mac," Brand ordered, "here's a dance hall suicide. Put it with local brevities, will you?"

Had Brand at this moment been able to see through the wall that separated the composing room from the hall he would have witnessed a sight that would have deprived him of some of the self-possession that marked his present demeanor. A figure clad in an elaborate evening gown crept softly up the stairway, stood irresolutely at the landing and then turned into the managing editor's office. Judith Bartelmy probably never looked more beautiful in her life than she did that night. A flush of excitement enhanced the soft allurements of her exquisite features, and the low cut neck of her sleeveless gown completed a picture of feminine loveliness that, innocently enough on her part, was admirably adapted to the purpose Judge Bartelmy had in his unprincipled mind when he sent her to the Advance office. "You are my only hope," he had told her after Dupuy had at first failed to locate Nolan. "You must go and plead with Wheeler Brand or else I am ruined. Your father will be ruined absolutely." At the sight of her father's emotion and yielding to the fervent pleadings of her only living parent she had willingly consented to undertake the mission. Unpleasant though she knew it would be, she believed it her duty to stand by in his hour of dire need the father whom she loved, the father whom she did not know.

As she entered the office and paused in conjecture as to just how she would proceed she heard footsteps hurriedly ascending the stairs, and, withdrawing into a shadow in a corner, she saw Michael Nolan and Mrs. Nolan cross the hall and disappear into the composing room.

"Thank heaven!" she murmured fervently. "They will stop this story, which father says is a horrible lie."

Wheeler Brand will never forget—caught Brand's expression and whirled about. Then he, too, saw the owner of the Advance and his wife draw near. The triumphant air with which the wife and mother sailed along by his side boded no good to Brand and his story.

Nolan paused in front of the form without looking at the contents at first.

"Wheeler," he said kindly, "I've been notified about this story, and I think it best that I read it carefully myself, analyze it and learn all the circumstances under which it was procured before I allow it to go to press. That is a task which cannot be done in the short time that remains before press time, so we had best let it go over until tomorrow—delay it one day. That won't hurt the story any."

"He thinks he's a great reformer and knows it all."

Mrs. Nolan clutched at the ex-miner's arm and cried shrilly:

"Now, now, Michael, that's not your usual way to explain things to one of your employees. Order him to destroy all this miserable stuff about the judge at once. Don't hesitate like this. Think what it means to me, to the children, to us," she pleaded.

"There, there, mother; you keep out of this," said Nolan kindly, yet firmly. "I'm trying to do the best I can for you. It's because of you that I'm here now. But you see—"

Ed Dupuy burst excitedly in upon them, and as the typesetters were beginning to become distracted from their work owing to the unusual situation Brand began to fear that this new intruder would prove the final demoralizer of the entire night shift.

"Mr. Nolan," cried Dupuy, "we haven't a minute to lose! They are almost ready to go to press! He looked intently at the newspaper owner.

"Yes, quite right. We go to press very soon," cried Brand confidently. "and I know Michael Nolan is the man who will order it done."

"Michael," cried Mrs. Nolan at the top of her voice, which rose sharply over the din of the typesetting machines, "are you going to stand for this? Mr. Brand acts as if he owned the Advance and treats us as if you were the office boy. He thinks he's a great reformer and knows it all. We other people have a right to our opinions, too, and I don't see why you and your family should be made to suffer on account of him as we have had to ever since you took him up."

Judith Bartelmy heard the stormy scene, lived a part of it herself huddled in the managing editor's office. She felt that Nolan would not let the story be used from what she had heard, and she could not suppress a pang of pain that pierced her heart at what she believed to be the fanatical vindictiveness of Wheeler Brand against her father. Yet she was a true woman, and she could not, in spite of her loyalty to her parent, avoid feeling a touch of pride at his strength of character, his determination, at the sacrifices he had made, to accomplish what he believed, even if foolishly, to be his duty.

"They don't need me," she finally muttered, and, gathering up her costly skirts, she tripped daintily across the paper strewn floor, out into the hall and down to her carriage.

Nolan dropped his head in thought when his wife had finished her tirade. He paced up and down nervously. He looked at the clock, then at the form with its accusing contents, then at Brand, then at his wife.

"I'll go and telephone Judge Bartelmy," put in Dupuy. "He'll be anxious."

"The lawyer took himself off."

Brand saw the danger of delay. He doubted if any man would be able to successfully withstand the pressure that Bartelmy and Nolan's family would be able to bring to bear on the owner in another twenty-four hours.

"No, no!" he exclaimed to Nolan. "You would fail me again. I have tried to prove this index's guilt to the people, but I fear I have only succeeded in proving it to his daughter. A day's delay would be fatal. I know. At least Bartelmy could get another judge to issue an injunction against us even if he would not dare to do it himself. And there are other steps he might take."

His voice rose higher, and he worked himself into a frenzy of earnestness. He stood before the little group gathered around the ink black form and continued his impassioned words:

"You know I thought we were going to be absolutely unmuzzled here. You were a free man. Poverty couldn't frighten you, and you had seen both sides of life. You promised to back me up, no matter what it cost, so long as we printed the truth, but at the first big test you fail me."

Mrs. Nolan was on the point of becoming hysterical in her agitation.

"Michael, Michael!" she began.

"There, mother, you go home with Sylvester. He's waiting outside for you. After all, this is a man's job we've got here. I am the head of the family, and I will settle this matter in my own way," he said sternly. "You must not attempt further to interfere."

He led her out of the room.

Brand spoke to McHenry.

"Did you hear, Mac?" he asked. "He won't decide to run it."

"It's tough, old man—it's tough!"

"This is such a live thing I don't see how I can kill it," the managing editor said, rubbing his hand over the face of the form.

"That's the best first page ever made up in America," said McHenry, with justifiable professional pride.

Brand was inconsolable.

"I've been working ten years for just this thing," he said. "Something so plain that even children would see what the big thieves are doing."

"You go home!" Brand suddenly ordered McHenry.

"What?" was the surprised exclamation.

"I said go home!"

Brand's face was beginning to twitch nervously. He stood in the middle of the composing room, under the flooding white glare from a sixty-four candle power electric light, and clinched and unclenched his hands, not daring to look McHenry squarely in the face. The night editor began to guess what was passing through Brand's mind.

"Yes, but," he began to protest—"but—"

Brand cut him short, saying agitatedly:

"I am still managing editor."

McHenry now realized plainly that the intensely earnest Brand had decided to run the story that very night regardless of Nolan's attitude. It would be an easy matter, as Nolan, of course, would not remain at the office much longer. And McHenry well knew that such an act would not only bring about Brand's discharge from the Advance, but that it would as well injure his reputation in other newspaper offices, where obedience to one's superior, as in any well regulated organization, is a man's first duty under all circumstances.

"Why, man," he exclaimed questioningly, "you're surely not going to run this story?"

Before Brand could give an answer to this last question, even if he had intended to do so, Nolan broke in on the pair.

"Mr. Nolan," began Brand, "you have heard the whole story of this miserable affair, both sides of it—Bartelmy's and my own, from our own lips. Whatever defense or explanation Bartelmy gave you I don't know. But so far as I am concerned, I told you the facts and the truth. You must believe it. Therefore why do you or how in heaven's name can you hesitate?"

Michael Nolan's face shone with the light of determination.

"Wheeler, my boy," he said, "I have learned much from you. I have needed contact with such a man as you. I have led a rough life for most of my career. When I rose to be chairman of the Street Railway Workers' union I did so simply through my ruggedness of character, my ability to master men. Then I was driven out into the world, an outcast, and became a day laborer in the mines. When the day came that I owned my own mine it was again a case of fight, fight, fight for the lawless claim jumpers threatened me above ground, and the lawless floods assailed me below ground. So in the life I led I did not get the opportunity to study or even become familiar with the important questions and the problems that confront the men that guide the policy of newspapers."

Nolan drew close to Brand and placed his hand affectionately on the young editor's shoulder.

"But you, Wheeler—you have taught me much about those big issues that I did not know, and you have shown to me the high ideals that should guide the newspaper writer, the newspaper editor and the newspaper owner as well. You are right in this case. His voice rose to majestic heights. "Wheeler Brand, I have learned from you that the Advance is more than a newspaper. It is a great, throbbing, potential force. It is the strong arm of the Right standing against the evil arm of the Wrong. So we must not falter. We must not delay. Show the big thieves up, Wheeler. Let the story go to press."

Nolan turned quickly away and hastened out and down into the street.

A warm glow of enthusiasm spread over the face of Wheeler Brand as he picked up a bundle of proofs.

"We'll show them up," he cried exultantly. "We'll show them up, and we'll put them down!"

Only One African Rhino

For years most South African hunters, and most naturalists, believed in the existence of two species of prehensile-lipped, or so-called "black," rhinoceros: one with the front horn much the longer, one with the rear horn at least equal to the front. It was Selous, a singularly clear-sighted and keen observer, who first proved conclusively that the difference was purely imaginary. Now, the curious thing is that these experienced hunters usually attributed entirely different temperaments to these two imaginary species. The first kind, that with the long front horn, they described as a miracle of dangerous ferocity, and the second as comparatively mild and inoffensive; and these veterans (Drummond is an instance) persuaded themselves that this was true, although they were writing in each case of identically the same animal!—From "African Game Trails," by Theodore Roosevelt, in the April Scribner.

Found Diamond in Tobacco

Elliott Robley, the engineer that handles the throttle of special engine No. 93, and residing at 919 Fifth Avenue, while at work about his engine yesterday took out a package of Sure Shot tobacco, took a bunch of the scrap and rammed it into his mouth. He began to chew when suddenly he struck something hard, broke a piece of one of his teeth, and then spit out the foreign article. It fell in the sunlight and as its glistering attracted his attention he picked it up and found it to be a diamond about a half carat in weight. He intends to have it mounted for his daughter.—Altoona Tribune.

What's in McClure's

An excellent pen picture of the Duke of the Abruzzi, a modern prince with an amazingly romantic career, has the leading position in the April number of McClure's Magazine. Other articles of no less interest are:

"Some Modern Ideas on Food," by Burton J. Hendrick, showing the baneful effects of meat diet; "Preventable of Blindness," by Marion Hamilton Carter, who takes up the cause of the needlessly blind, and shows that one-fourth of the children in the blind asylums are unnecessarily blind; "Pollies in Criminal Procedure," by Charles B. Brewer, and "What Whiskey Is," by H. Parker Willis. Among the short stories are "The Purple Stockings," by Edwin Salisbury Field; "For the Sake of Her Children," by Octavia Roberts; "At Brady's," by Mary Heaton Vorse; "The Curse of the Horetic," by Seumas McManus; and "The Kite," another war story by the author of "The Joint in the Harness."

We are not near the millennium. The world is gone mad on the dollar, and is intoxicated with the desire to be amused, not strengthened and inspired by higher ideals. We talk of educating the eye and the hand and put the clutch of mammon on heart and brain, and men and women are wasted and lost that might have been immortal. We will have time to live our little lives and end them long before the coming of the millennium, of which there is no immediate prospect.—Pennsylvania School Journal.

PREVENTING SPREAD OF DISEASE

The Pennsylvania Railroad, it has been learned here, will shortly begin to furnish individual drinking cups in all its waiting-rooms in this state. Officials of the road for some months have been preparing to conform with the recommendations of the State Board of Health to abolish the public drinking cup.

"The public drinking cup as is truly a poisoned cup as though it contained arsenic or strychnine," is the statement with which Dr. Dixon, Secretary of the State Board of Health has gone on record. "There is scarcely a person," he says, "so ignorant as not to be aware that consumption is caused by a germ, and that same germ lurks in the mouth and on the lips of the consumptive and thence is consequently communicated to any drinking vessel that the consumptive puts to his lips. The same is true of diphtheria and other infectious diseases."

The Pennsylvania Railroad has for some time been experimenting with bottled water in its coaches and it is understood that the old ice tank and public cup will be replaced in coaches by bottled water and some kind of an individual drinking cup arrangement.

"The following picture from actual life can be duplicated on almost every train," says the State Board of Health Monthly Bulletin: "The father of a family, well gone in consumption, after a fit of coughing and its necessary result hastens to cool his burning throat, his sweeping mustache spreading well over the sides of the glass and into the water. The glass, with no pretense of cleansing, is gallantly brought back to the wife with the innocent baby in her arms, both of whom partake, and then the other children, seized with imitative thirst, go to the cooler and drink from the same glass."

Recently the school authorities in every city and town in the state have been warned by the state health officer to prohibit the common use of drinking cups by the school children.

Errors of Exercise

What the average business man or office worker is doing when he rushes through his gymnasium, cyclone-fashion, chins himself fifteen or twenty times, pumps on the parallel bar, or swings on the horizontal bar for five minutes, smashes the medicine ball back and forth, hammers himself purple in the face on the punching bag, runs ten times around the racing gallery, and takes a hot shower bath and a rub-down all in eighteen and a half minutes, is simply loading himself to the bursting point with the fatigue of poisons of muscular effort and allowing no time for their elimination. He came to the gymnasium from his office with his blood loaded with the fatigue toxins of brain work. He adds to them an additional amount of the muscle fatigue poisons and goes on his way rejoicing, both barrels loaded with carbon dioxide, instead of one as before.—Dr. Woods Hutchinson, in the April Cuting.

The Story of The Resurrection

IN the end of the sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre.

And, behold, there was a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it.

His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow:

And for fear of him the keepers did shake and became as dead men.

And the angel answered and said unto the women, fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.

He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay.

And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee: there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you.

And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy; and did run to bring his disciples word.

And as they went to tell his disciples, behold, Jesus met them, saying, All hail. And they came and held him by the feet and worshipped him.

Then said Jesus unto them, Be not afraid: go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson I.—Second Quarter, For
April 3, 1910.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. ix, 18-34.
Memory Verses, 28, 29—Golden Text,
Mark ix, 23—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

This lesson gives an account of four different acts of healing upon five different people—the ruler's daughter, twelve years of age; the woman twelve years sick, the two blind men and the demon possessed dumb man. Matthew, Mark and Luke record the first two, but Matthew alone tells of the others. All are equally easy to Him to whom nothing is difficult when there is confidence in Him. The principle of verse 29 holds all through. "According to your faith be it unto you." But we must always remember that these were samples of the kingdom which was then at hand, but because of His rejection postponed till He shall come again. As I understand it, we cannot expect kingdom manifestations in this age of His rejection except as He may in great grace see fit to grant them. But as the age draws to a close, which it is rapidly doing, we may look for greater signs as the kingdom of heaven again draweth nigh. May we, like Stephen, be full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, full of faith and power.

The other accounts of the first two healings are found in Mark v and Luke viii. There we are told that the man's name was Jairus; that he was a ruler of the synagogue; that he fell down at Jesus' feet and besought Him greatly, for his little daughter was lying at the point of death, and she was his only daughter. Jesus arose and followed Jairus, and so did His disciples, and much people also followed Him and thronged Him. Consider the anxiety of the father's heart and his expectation, for, although he had not heard the words "I will come and heal her" (viii, 7), was not the Lord Jesus Christ with him, and was not that assurance enough for Jairus?

But in the throng that pressed upon Him there was one desolate heart—a woman who had been ailing for twelve years and, having spent all that she had upon physicians, was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse. She, having heard of Jesus, had such confidence in Him that she said within herself, "If I may touch His clothes I shall be whole." She accordingly pressed through the crowd behind Him, touched the border of His garment and was instantly healed of her illness of many years.

Most gratefully and gladly would she have slipped away without troubling Him further; but He had more for her than she had dared to expect. He had a personal word for her heart full of peace and assurance. Before she could get away Jesus, knowing all things, asked who touched Him, for he knew that virtue had gone out of Him. The disciples were surprised at His question, seeing so many touching Him, but the woman came with fear and trembling, fell down before Him and before all the people declared why she had touched Him and how she had been immediately healed. Then came to her the added, unexpected blessing in His precious words to her heart: "Daughter, be of good comfort; thy faith hath made thee whole. Go in peace and be whole of thy plague." Instead of the unrest she might have had because she had, as it were, stolen a blessing, she had His own word of "peace." Then she might have had some symptoms of a recurrence of her trouble, and the devil would be sure to be on hand with some unrestful suggestions, but now she had not only an experience, but His infallible word that she was healed, and had He not called her "daughter," and wasn't that worth while? Let all secret believers confess Jesus Christ publicly and see what additional blessing will surely come to them.

But all this delay has seemingly made Him too late to help the little girl, for before He reaches the house messengers come, saying that she is dead. As soon as Jesus heard it He said to Jairus, "Fear not, believe only, and she shall be made whole" (Luke viii, 50). And quickly it is even so, and she is alive and well and eating like any well child. Only the father and the mother and Peter, James and John were present at the raising to life—just seven, including Jesus and the little girl, the unbelieving scoffers all without. Let us be "most surely believers, knowing the certainty" of all His words (Luke i, 1-4). He is never too late, and nothing is too hard for Him who created all things.

Two blind men follow Him into the next house, into which He enters, begging Him to have mercy on them. His one question was, "Believe ye that I am able to do this?" Their affirmative reply brings His "According to your faith be it unto you," then His touch, and they see like other men; yet, unlike many, they see Jesus, their healer and start forth to spread abroad His fame.

The next case is a dumb demon possessed man, and by a word he is healed. No wonder that the multitude said, "It was never so seen in Israel," for one like this had never been seen before. Whether we touch Him or He touches us or speaks the word, His power is manifest. May we all touch Him in the consciousness of our helplessness and need, as the long suffering woman did, and not indifferently, like the crowd.
